

How could the next economic boom be initiated?

A positive future offering many worthwhile as well as exciting tasks and jobs

The idea basically is about following a new approach with the help of a book, a seminar and a business idea based thereon. This way will lead us out of a world of mass unemployment into a new era with a lot of worthwhile and exciting things to do.

As Albert Einstein (from 1879 to 1955) said: "You can recognise a really good idea by the fact that its realisation seems impossible right from the start."

While (computerised) machines are doing most of our daily tasks and duties - reliably and for little money, we take this free time and use it for worthwhile and pleasant things. How could that work? Instead of artificially creating jobs by taking on national debts, e.g. ABM job creation scheme, instead of production on tick and overproduction as known from the automotive industry, or totally weird products and a myriad of unnecessary services as in the public services sector, we will discover plenty of unique tasks profitably and naturally by unfolding our abilities, gifts, passions, and values and by handling information and knowledge way more productive.

Therefore we need a society (environment) that enables a different way of thinking and acting based on new aims and values. That's why I wrote the book "Netzwerkkompetenz warum?" ("Networking skills – what for?") describing my vision of a new society.

But the most integral part of this future society will be us ourselves with our new views plus different ways of thinking and acting. Visit one of my seminars and find out more about my ideas of how to approach and initiate this positive kind of society.

I want to provide both the book and the seminar online so that as many people as possible can access it, think about my ideas and of course form their very own opinion. Naturally, this does imply that you read the book, think it through, ask questions, discuss opinions and so on – to enable and to foster this constructive debate around my vision I established the shared learning environment. Via this Internet platform we can discuss and advance the book, the seminar, the teaching/learning concept as well as the learning environment itself for a mutual success and for making the vision come true. The ideas in the book and from the seminar shall be the basis for any discussions and they shall especially inspire and animate the thoughts of each and every person.

To set up and manage the above-mentioned platform, I'm looking for committed and capable co-entrepreneurs who would like to exemplify the ideas through their own life so that an increasing number of people will feel invited to participate and take actions themselves.

Last but not least, this shared learning environment will eventually be the basis for a decision platform where referendums and public decisions can be held.

Where would we stand today, if all our ancestors just said "that's impossible" and nobody ever had taken the step to really find out what mankind could achieve, if people would hit the road with a backpack full of courage, determination and energy to find out if something really wouldn't work?
